Dear Firemen,

Thank you for saving many, many people of our country. Everyday you get up to save people from many different things. You may have to save a trapped child in a burning house, or put out a car fire. You may just be saving a cat high up in a tree. Either way you wake up every morning to save people that live in the country you love.

Although you do have to put out blazing fires that are at least 500°F, you did have to train to do that. You had to learn a million gadgets on the side of a massive truck. You had to learn how to control a very powerful hose. Though you had to do all this, it obviously paid off.
